Diana Vuong is the Vice President, Finance and Chief Financial Officer at Vancouver Airport Authority, the non-share corporation that operates Vancouver International Airport (YVR). As a key member of the Executive Team, Diana is involved in all facets of the Airport Authority's business and is responsible for finance, enterprise risk management and sustainability reporting. During the pandemic, Diana's leadership was critical in orchestrating YVR's response to the impact of the border closures. This strategic thinking and action ensured YVR remained an efficient and effective operation that was financially sustainable and continued to support our community.

Diana is also a leader in the aviation industry in Canada. She is the Vice-Chair of the CFO Committee of the Canadian Airports Council and represents Canadian Airports on the World Economics Committee, addressing finance and sustainability at the Airports Council International (ACI) World, the industry's international body. Outside of her corporate role, Diana is a passionate member of the CPA profession and works hard to be positive role model—particularly for women. She brings her leadership, enthusiasm, and financial skillsets to the boards of the Richmond Hospital Foundation and the Greater Vancouver Board of Trade. She also spends time as a mentor, speaker and advisor to many within YVR and in the broader business community as a whole.

Diana holds a Bachelor of Business Administration from Simon Fraser University and is a Chartered Professional Accountant with over 20 years of experience. She resides in Richmond and has a busy family life with two young children.

Please join us in celebrating Diana's achievements. Congratulations, Diana!
